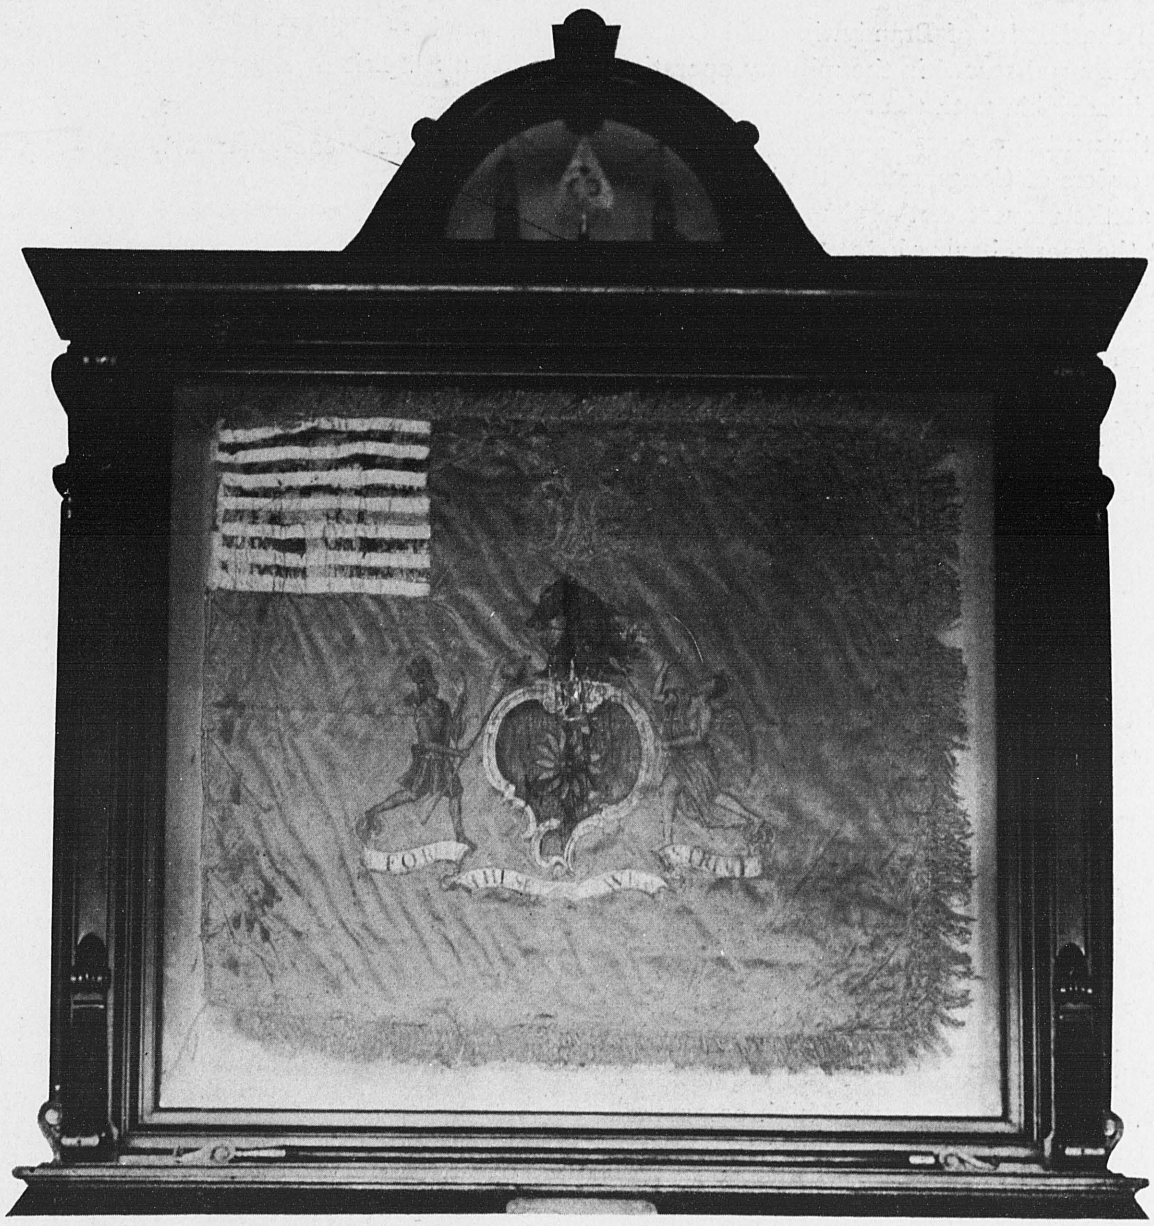
THE TRENTON BATTLE MONUMENT

DEDICATED AT TRENTON, OCTOBER 19, 1893

THE illustration on page 8 shows the base of the Trenton Battle Monument, which was unveiled on October 19, 1893. The feature, which is particularly interesting to Pennsylvanians, is the bronze statue of Blair McClenachan, a soldier of the Philadelphia Troop of Light Horse, which was placed on the east side of the doorway of the Monument. This was unveiled by Captain Joseph Lapsley Wilson, the commanding officer of the Troop. In front of the platform is the old silken standard, carried by the Troop in the Battle of Trenton, in charge of the Guard of Honor, Quartermaster Hugh Craig, Jr., and Cornet Charles E. Kelly (non-active).



The Prized Standard of the First Troop, P. C. C. Carried during the Revolution

A full description of this valuable relic, which attracted so much attention on that occasion, will be found on page 4.

We deem it most fitting at this time to give a reprint of Captain Wilson's presentation address:

Mr. President: On the 17th of November, 1774, there was organized in the city of Philadelphia a troop of light horse. The names of twenty-eight gentlemen appear on the first roll. Fifteen of these names are to be found on the non-importation agreement of the merchants and traders of Philadelphia of October 25, 1765, and three on the list of the then lately formed Committee of Correspondence to collect the sense of the Provinces in the impending crisis. They knew each other socially as well as in mercantile and professional life. They were members of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, the St. Andrew's Society and the Society of the Sons of St. George, and for recreation they joined in the sports of the Schuylkill Fishing Company and the Gloucester Fox Hunting Club.

Although armed resistance was then only a possibility, this troop was pledged to the side of the Colonies in the struggle with the British Ministry. The members armed and equipped themselves, and chose their officers. In the summer of 1775 their Captain devised the standard of the troop. A fac-simile of this standard is carried to-day, and, to do full honor to the occasion, the original is before you. This standard shows thirteen stripes in the canton, and thirteen ribbons tied in a knot in the shield—the earliest instance of these symbols used on an American banner.

The troop paraded on June 20, 1775, with the brigade in Philadelphia, and was reviewed by General Washington, who three days afterwards left to take command of the army at Massachusetts Bay, escorted by the troop through Trenton, New Brunswick, Newark and New York as far as Kingsbridge—fourteen miles up the Hudson river.

During the following year details of this troop, in the service of Congress or of the Committee of Safety, marched as escorts with money or despatches to the camps of the army at various points.

In August, 1776, a part of the troop was sent by Congress, at the request of General Mercer, to his headquarters at Perth Amboy. Several troopers appear to have been with the army at headquarters at Morristown in November, and the entire command joined General Washington at Trenton on the 3d of December, marched with him to Princeton, and, covering the retreat five days later, was the last to cross to the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware. On Christmas night the troop marched with Washington and Greene to this historic spot, and was present during the battle and returned with the Commander-in-Chief. On December 30 it again crossed the river, through floating ice, and marched with the army to Trenton, where, on the night of January 2, it was entrusted with the duty of renewing the camp fires in the rear of the army. The troop especially distinguished itself the next morning at Princeton, and was with Washington in the front when he drove the enemy over fields and fences and saved the day. For the next three weeks the troop was at headquarters at Morristown, and, the campaign being over, received the letter of thanks and discharge from Washington, and was permitted to return to Philadelphia, having been the only cavalry in the campaign.

The troop took part in the Battles of Brandywine and Germantown, camped at Valley Forge and served in the military operations in the neighborhood of Philadelphia until the British evacuated the city, in June, 1778. For the next two years the troop was employed in various services under orders of Congress and the State authorities, and in June, 1780, at the request of the Commander-in-chief, was again at Trenton, but the enemy having left the State it returned home, having received another letter of thanks from Washington. During the remaining years of the war the troop was again several times in active service in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. In all the military duty of the Revolution the troopers were volunteers in the fullest sense and not bound by fixed enlistment.

Besides their service as soldiers, we find that twenty-seven members subscribed £77,500 to the bank which was founded June 17, 1780, "for furnishing a supply of provisions for the armies of the United States."

In April, 1789, the troop escorted General Washington on his way to New York to be inaugurated President of the United States, and in 1794 marched in his command to the western counties of Pennsylvania to suppress the whiskey insurrection. In the second war with Great Britain it was in active service, with sixty-six men, and in the Mexican War several of its members served as officers in the United States army. Its Captain, John Butler, died in Mexico as Captain of the Third United States dragoons. In the War of the Rebellion, the troop again furnishing its own horses and equipment, served, eighty-six in strength, with Thomas C. James as its Captain, under the first call for volunteers, the only volunteer cavalry accepted. It was assigned to the Second Regiment, United States Cavalry, under command of Captain George H. Thomas, and served in the campaign of the Shenandoah Valley. Upon expiration of enlistment it was mustered out under orders, with high commendation from General Banks and General (then Colonel) George H. Thomas.

Some seventy members readily found positions as officers in regiments then being formed. Captain James as Colonel of the Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, died in service. The men who did not join other commands as officers recruited the ranks of the troop, which took the field several times for short enlistments during the years 1863 and 1864.

From the day of its founding, the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, has maintained a continuous military existence, and for more than one hundred years a troop of cavalry, bearing the same name, in the service of the State of Pennsylvania, the officers commissioned, and the rank and file enlisted according to law. Its own armory contains the full material for a troop of legal maximum strength, consisting of camp and garrison equipage, horse furniture, clothing, arms and accouterments. All members must enter this association as private soldiers, and the rolls show the names of many who had attained distinction as officers in active service before they became members, as well as the names of many distinguished soldiers who received their early military training in its ranks.

And now, in the presence of their standard which was carried in the fight which here took place, in loving remembrance of its founders and as an earnest of endeavor to perpetuate their work, this association asks you to take into your keeping this bronze soldier. We have placed the figure at the feet of the commander, and have inscribed upon the base his own words:

"The Philadelphia Troop of Light Horse, under the command of Captain Morris, having perform'd their Tour of duty, are discharged for the present—

"I take this opportunity of returning my most sincere thanks to the Captain and to the Gentlemen who compose the Troop, for the many essential services which they have rendered to their Country, and to me personally during the Course of this severe Campaign. Tho' composed of Gentlemen of Fortune, they have shewn a noble Example of discipline and subordination, and in several Actions have shewn a Spirit of Bravery which will ever do Honor to them and will ever be gratefully remembered by me.

"Given at Head-Quarters,

"Morristown, this 23d Jany., 1777.

"Gº. WASHINGTON."

The acceptance of the statue of the trooper was made by Honorable John Taylor, of the association.

Among the relics preserved by the Troop none relating to its earliest history possesses more value, or is of greater interest, than the old Standard, carried by the company during all the campaigns in which it was engaged throughout the Revolutionary struggle, and which has been handed down through successive generations of Troopers to the present. The design of the Standard led the way for the creation of the glorious Stars and Stripes, and is on the best historical authority the earliest instance of the thirteen stripes being used upon an American banner. The Standard, presented to what was then called the Philadelphia Troop of Light Horse, by its first captain, Abraham Markoe, in 1775, is still in admirable condition, and exhibits good taste and judgment in design and magnificence of embellishment. What catches the eye particularly is the canton, or field, of ultra-marine and silver stripes, thirteen in number, in the upper right hand corner of the light, bright yellow silk ensign. The same thought of the thirteen original States united is carried out in the knot within the azure shield in the centre, thirteen wavy, divergent ends radiating from three interlacings of the knot, and further in the costume of the Continental masquerading as an Indian, drawn upon one of the upcurled ends of the floating scroll, beneath the central shield, and bearing the motto, "For these we strive." The head dress of the figure is of five feathers, alternately of dark red and gold, and the kilt, or ga-ka-ah of eight, also of dark red and gold in alternation, making thirteen in all. The Troop accompanied General Washington in June, 1775, from Philadelphia through New York en route to take command of the army in Massachusetts. It is therefore almost certain that Washington remembered the thirteen stripes of the Troop Standard when he designed the flag of the United Colonies raised at Cambridge, January 1, 1776, bearing upon its field the thirteen stripes in red and white, as now found on the national standard, its union being the cross of St. George and the saltier of St. Andrew, as on the British merchant flag at the time. The substitution of the union of white stars in a blue field was ordered by a resolution of Congress passed June 14, 1777. The Standard was carried by the Troop throughout the Revo-

COLONEL ARCHIBALD LOUDON SNOWDEN

Colonel Archibald Loudon Snowden, senior surviving honorary Captain of the Troop, descends from one of the oldest families in America, his ancestry going back to the earliest settlers in Virginia and New England. In Philadelphia his family owned land under patents from the Duke of York, thirteen years before the landing of William Penn. His ancestor, John Snowden, was born in Philadelphia in 1685, and was the first elder ordained in the Presbyterian Church in America. From that early period to the present time the descendants of John Snowden, who include the Henry, Mitchell and other families, have taken a conspicuous part in the military, professional and public life of the city. Colonel Snowden's father, Dr. Isaac Wayne Snowden, was surgeon in the United States Army under General Jackson during the Indian Wars in Florida, as was his great-grandfather in the Revolutionary War.

Colonel Snowden was educated at Jefferson (now Washington and Jefferson) College, Washington, Pa. Whilst engaged in the study of law he entered the Mint service as register, under his uncle, the late James Ross Snowden, then Director of the Mint. On the outbreak of the War of the Rebellion he greatly assisted in organizing a regiment of infantry, and was elected and commissioned as its lieutenant colonel. The number of troops offering their service to the State was so greatly in excess of the quota that but five of the companies of the regiment were accepted by the Governor. In December, 1877, he was appointed Postmaster by President Grant, and continued as such until 1879, when, after declining the Directorship of the Mint at Washington, tendered him by President Hayes, he became Superintendent of the Philadelphia Mint. After the election of President Cleveland, in 1885, he resigned his office. In his long official connection with the Mint he rendered a valuable and honorable service.

CAPTAIN FIRST TROOP, P. C. C. (HONORARY)

On July 1, 1889, he was appointed by President Harrison as United States Minister to Greece and Roumania, and shortly after his appointment the grade of the mission was raised by special act of Congress to that of first-class. The intelligence and tact displayed at Athens and Bucharest, where he negotiated important treaties, resulted in his transfer to the important mission at Madrid, and on his retirement from this mission he received the cordial thanks of the Department of State for the energy and ability displayed in closing important diplomatic questions long pending between the United States and Spain.

He was made Cornet of the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, January 11, 1870; Second Lieutenant, January 25, 1875; First Lieutenant, February 15, 1875, and Captain, March 5, 1877, resigning March 4, 1878.

LIEUT. J. WILLIS MARTIN

Lieutenant J. Willis Martin was born in this city forty years ago.

He was educated in private schools, and subsequently was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, where he took a full classical course. After his graduation he registered as a law student in the office of J. Sergeant Price, and was admitted to the Bar in June, 1879. He became associated with his preceptor, and two years later was admitted to practice law in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and in the different United States Courts. Upon the death of Mr. Price, about six years ago, Mr. Martin formed a copartnership with his preceptor's son, Eli Kirk Price, which firm exists to-day, and has its office at 709 Walnut street, in a building which has been occupied by four generations of the Martin family.

Mr. Martin's experience in law has been a busy and varied one. Besides acting as trustee and counsel in many large estates, he has devoted considerable time and study to the law pertaining to the vast coal and oil interests in this State. He has represented some of the largest interests in this line, and also has devoted much time to the intricate real estate laws. He is counsel for the Land Title and Trust Company, and in this capacity has had a field for hard and difficult work. He is well versed also in corporation law, having acted as counsel for the Race and Vine Streets and Hestonville and Mantua Passenger Railway Companies for years, and until their consolidation with the Union Traction Corporation.

Mr. Martin, while always an ardent American, was special counsel in this country for the government of Spain prior to the breaking out of the war between that country and the United States. He represented the King of Spain in the many filibustering trials tried in the Federal Courts of the United States. When war was declared against Spain, Mr. Martin resigned his commission and enlisted in the United States Army and fought with the First City Troop throughout the Porto Rican campaign. He has been active for years in military affairs and at present, besides being second lieutenant in the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, he is acting inspector of rifle practice. He is a member of the Military Service Institution and of the Society of Porto Rican Expeditions.

He is a member of the Board of Censors of the Law Association, also one of the Board of Directors of the Lawyers' Club. He is a member of the Board of Examiners of Public Accountants and a member of the Pennsylvania State and American Bar Associations.

He is also an active friend of the University of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the Central Alumnae, life member of the Houston Club and of the Athletic Association of the University. He is an active spirit in the Society of Colonial Wars of the Commonwealth

AN INDOOR parade of the Second Infantry will take place December 10th, in commemoration of the sixty-first anniversary. On the following evening the Old Guard of this famous time-honored command will hold its "Smash Batter," when it is expected that many pleasant reminiscences will be related, especially of the days when the boys carried the 58-calibers in the "National Guards."

UNDER a new ruling, the Bell Telephone Company will not permit the transmission of messages to a pay station from the armory phones. This is a great handicap to the officers, especially in the first Brigade District, where it is necessary to have frequent communication with non-commissioned officers living near pay stations. It seems rather inconsistent to choke off a necessity of this kind, while any person can go to a private phone and connect with a pay station. This rule is likely to seriously hamper the quick mobilization of troops at the armory in case of an emergency.

LIEUTENANT EDWIN BRINTON, leader of the First Brigade Band, is at a loss to understand why he should not receive an original issue of equipments, based on the same conditions as the Infantry companies, who were mustered in the State service in '98. He now owes the Adjutant General's Department $1,458.00. His annual allowance being $500.00, it can be easily seen that it will take three years to liquidate the account. We might say, in this connection, that Lieutenant Brinton is more fortunate than the bandmasters of the Second and Third Brigades, as he receives a city appropriation of $500.00, which should tide him over his financial difficulties.

COLONEL WILLIAM G. PRICE, JR., Third Infantry, who is an extensive operative builder in the city of Pittsburg, had a very peculiar experience on the morning of November 6th.

While leisurely walking through Fifth avenue, in company with a business friend, he jokingly remarked that he could very conveniently use a lot of surplus cash that day in business. While engaged in this conversation, he espied a very clean looking official envelope lying in the street, but he had continued his walk for nearly a hundred yards, when a sudden impulse prompted him to return to the place where he had noticed the envelope, his friend, in the meantime eying him keenly. Upon investigation, he was greatly surprised to find it contained a Pennsylvania Railroad draft, payable at the first National Bank, for $85,000.00.

How singularly the Colonel's wish was gratified, even though but for a few moments; for he hastily visited the first National Bank and turned the valuable paper over to the president, who was very profuse in his thanks.

Personal Mention

Lieutenant Hugh Craig, Jr. (retired), is preparing for an extensive visit abroad. He has been a very zealous worker in the Guard for many years and has been Treasurer of the First Troop since 1874.

Ex-Sergeant LeRoy Meeker, formerly Company "I," Thirteenth Infantry, located at Easton, is mentioned as a possible candidate for a Battalion Adjutancy.

Quartermaster Lieutenants McDowell and Williams, Batteries B and C, are endeavoring to have the Quartermaster's rank elevated to that of First Lieutenant.

It is stated that Captain John Hall Rankin, Adjutant of the Sixth Infantry, is about to resign from the service owing to pressure of business, and that Colonel Coryell, in this event, will tender the position to Major Thomas Martin, Secretary of the Fairmount Park Commission and former aide-de-camp on the division staff under General Snowden. Major Martin is a thorough executive officer and would make a valuable acquisition to Colonel Coryell's Sixth.

The weekly sociables inaugurated by the Easton City Guard (Company "I," Thirteenth Infantry) are proving quite successful, and have greatly increased the drill attendance. It will be remembered that this Company for several years has stood at the head of the Division in point of efficiency. They are now very anxious to extend their knowledge of tactics to the school of the Battalion, and it has been suggested that it would be an excellent idea to attach them to Colonel O'Neill's Fourth Infantry, in which regimental district they are located. In this manner battalion drills could be held monthy in the city of Allentown, where the regimental headquarters and Companies "B" and "D" are located.

HON. D. S. B. CHEW

(Illusteation on parg 16)

Honorable D. S. B. Chew, Chairman of the Military Committee of the House of Representatives, present Ordnance Officer and acting I. R. P., entered the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, November 5, 1888, beeing appointed aid-de-camp First Brigade Staff, July 8, 1895; brigade quartermaster, June 9, 1897. He was elected major of the Nineteenth Regiment Infantry, March 21, 1899; honorably discharged, January 31, 1900; ordnance officer, First Brigade Staff, February 6, 1900.

lution, and in 1794, when Washington was in command of the army suppressing the rebellion in Western Pennsylvania, and on all important parades, until 1830, when it was determined, in order to permit of the preservation of the flag, to discontinue its use in service. It is, however, always displayed at the anniversary dinners and entertainments. In 1874 it was thought desirable that the Standard should no longer be handled, and a handsome frame and case was made for it and a special repository was built for its preservation, which is duplicated in the new armory just erected on Twenty-third street, above Chestnut.

Captain J. Lapsley Wilson (non-active) tells a very interesting story of having met, in 1873, a gentleman, a relative of Captain John Dunlap, who commanded the Troop during the period from 1794 to 1803. The gentleman possessed a very fine painting of Captain Dunlap, which, he stated, had been highly prized by several preceding generations. Captain Wilson admired the picture very much and jokingly said he should like to have it for the Troop. A polite refusal was given, but the Captain, undismayed by this, exacted a promise that the portrait should be included in the gentleman's will for the Troop. This promise was given, and notwithstanding that the generous donor reached the ripe old age of eighty-four, Captain Wilson, after waiting twenty-eight long years, is afforded the pleasure of turning over to the Troop on this most appropriate occasion an excellent painting of one of the early Troop commanders.

The original uniform of the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, suggested itself from the suits worn by the Gloucester Fox Hunting Club and the Schuylkill Fishing Club. These were brown edged with white. In a series of plates published by the United States Government, showing the various uniforms worn since the organization of the army, that of the First Troop is officially mentioned and illustrated.

In publishing this souvenir number of the "Journal," devoted to the formal occupation of the new armory and the 127th anniversary of the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, we have endeavored to present the readers with a few historical facts concerning this famous organization. Since its inception, it has contained on its rolls men who have achieved distinction in military and civil life, which in many instances, no doubt, was due to their early training in the First Troop.

CORNET CHARLES E. KELLY

Honorary Cornet Charles E. Kelly, one of the Guard of Honor in charge of the Standard at the unveiling of the Trenton Battle Monument, comes from a naval and military family. He is a great-grandson of Robert Hopkins, who is No. 111 on the Troop roll, having been elected September 24, 1787, and made honorary June 20, 1798; and he is the nephew of Thomas Smith, No. 531 on the Troop roll, elected May 14, 1844, who became cornet in 1852 and second lieutenant in 1853.

Cornet Charles E. Kelly was elected April 6, 1874, reported for duty May 11, 1874; Lance Corporal, July, 1877; First Corporal, October 1, 1877; Fifth Sergeant, January 10, 1878; First Sergeant, October 6, 1879; Cornet, March 20, 1882; resigned Cornetcy in April, 1885, because of ill health; non-active and honorary, May 4, 1885.

THE NEW ARMORY

The magnificent and substantial fortress-like structure, of which an illustration appears on page one, was erected solely through the efforts of the individual members and is owned by the corporation, First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, which body has no connection with the State service, the Troop proper being comprised of nearly two hundred gentlemen, all of whom, however, before being eligible to the non-active roll, were obliged to serve a seven-year enlistment in the active National Guard Troop. It will be seen that with this term of enlistment promotion is naturally slow, but when it does come the worth and ability of a non-commissioned officer is fully understood by the members, and, in this manner, it is possible to have capable and efficient officers in command of the Troop at all times.

The following is a brief description of the new armory at Twenty-third and Ranstead streets, which was designed by Newman, Woodman & Harris, architects. The front, side and rear walls are of Holmesburg granite, laid in broken range, and are about 24 inches in thickness. The Administration Building has a frontage of 92 feet 9 inches with a depth of 41 feet; the Drill Shed is 241 feet long by 90 feet wide, and the Assembly Room is 36 feet by 60 feet. There is also a spectators' gallery in the Drill Shed.

The floor of the drill hall and runway is made firm by cinders well rammed, over which is a sufficient spread of tank bark. The spans of the immense Drill Shed are of structural steel and iron and the floors in the Administration Building are carried on steel beam girders, resting on the walls. The floors in the Reception Room and Library are of oak; in all other rooms of yellow pine, laid in a rough flooring of hemlock, with an approved deafening felt between. The interior woodwork, including wainscoting in the drill hall, window trims, doors, base-boards, chair rails, picture mouldings, lockers, etc., are of Georgia yellow pine. The doors of the main entrance are of solid oak. The main stairs have cast iron risers carried on light iron horses, and slate treads.

The water service and water pipes are so placed as to be readily reached for examination or repairs. All the exposed pipes are boxed and packed with mineral wool to protect them from frost. The lavatory facilities are exceptionally fine, the wash-basins, being 15 by 19 inches, countersunk in white Italian marble slabs; the showers, etc., are also selected white Italian marble, Mott's showers being provided in the several rooms. The floors of the lavatories are of hexagonal, vitreous, non-absorbent tiles and the walls of ivory glazed tiles.

The gas piping and electric work is of the latest approved standard, and can amply supply all burners at one time with a full head. The building is wired throughout with the three-wire system, generally carried on porcelain. The drill hall is lighted with arc lights.

All the hardware is of the best quality, strong and substantial throughout; the hardware in the main stairs, halls, reception rooms, library, officers' rooms, meeting room and small room adjoining being of solid bronze metal. The kitchen, pantry and service room is polished bronze plate on steel and iron.

The building is heated by a low pressure of steam heating, condensed water from the radiators returning to the boiler by gravity. The various rooms on the first, second and third floors are heated by direct radiation. The pipe system used is known as the two-pipe system, one pipe supplying steam to the radiators, the other carrying away the condensed water and delivering same back into the boiler automatically. This system will heat all rooms to 70 degrees in the most severe winter weather and will not exceed five (5) pounds pressure at any time. The system is also noiseless, the pipes being of ample size, carefully graded, to prevent accumulation of water, which is the cause of noise. For the hot water needed for cleaning harness and other work in the building, there is a separate hot water generator provided. This is set up at the side of the heating plant.

GENERAL E. BURD GRUBB

General Edward Burd Grubb, second senior surviving Captain of the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, and one of the most practical commanders of the Troop, is descended from distinguished Revolutionary ancestry, his great-grandfather, Colonel Peter Grubb, having command of a Pennsylvania Regiment in General Washington's army and married Mary Shippen Burd, daughter of Colonel James Burd, one of Washington's staff. General Grubb's father was an extensive miner of iron ores and manufacturer of pig iron in Pennsylvania. The son studied in the schools of his native city, Burlington, N. J., and in the college of that name, from which he graduated with first honors in 1860. Shortly afterward the Civil War broke out, and although not yet twenty years old, he entered the service as second lieutenant in the Third Regiment of New Jersey, which was sent to Washington and participated in the First Battle of Bull Run. The young officer was soon after promoted to a first lieutenancy, and the brigade to which his regiment was attached became part of McClellan's army before Richmond, where it saw severe service, as afterward at the Second Battle of Bull Run. After passing through sharp work at the battle of South Mountain, Md., Lieutenant Grubb was promoted Major of the Twenty-third New Jersey, and on December 26, 1862, was made Lieutenant Colonel of the same regiment for gallant conduct at the battle of Fredericksburg. At Chancellorsville he behaved with equal gallantry, the men being nerved to daring by his example. While the regiment lay at Beverly, N. J., before being finally mustered out, the invasion of Pennsylvania by Lee took place. Colonel Grubb asked for volunteers to defend a sister State, and the whole force at once offered their services. They were taken to Harrisburg, where they threw up rifle pits for the defense of that city.

MAJOR D. S. B. CHEW

In 1864 Colonel Grubb led the Thirty-seventh Regiment, doing duty before Petersburg. On March 4, 1865, he was made Brevet Brigadier General of Volunteers for meritorius service.

After the close of the war, he became somewhat interested in public affairs, serving the Burlington Common Council as its President for several years. While not, strictly speaking, a Philadelphian, General Grubb's ancestry and his business and social relations have been so closely connected with this city that he is usually looked upon as one of its citizens. In October, 1881, he commanded the New Jersey Battalion in the centennial celebration at Yorktown, Va.

February 2, 1874, he was elected a member of the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry; Captain, April 22, 1878; re-elected April 23, 1883, April 23, 1888, and resigned September 18, 1889. July 23, 1894, he was again elected Captain of the Troop, which position he held until October 12, 1896. He is also on the roll of retired officers of the National Guard of Pennsylvania by General Order No. 18, 1890.

CAPTAIN JOHN C. GROOME

One of the ablest of Troop Commanders is Captain John C. Groome, under whose command the organization has attained a high standard of efficiency. It was through his persistent efforts that the sanitary condition of the Troop's camp, during the Porto Rican campaign, was so well kept that comparatively little sickness prevailed. He was private, January 2, 1882; corporal, March 19, 1887; sergeant, June 26, 1889; cornet, January 6, 1894; first lieutenant, August 6, 1894; captain, November 13, 1896; Captain First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, Pennsylvania Volunteers (Spanish-American War), May 7, 1898; was mustered out with the Troop November 21, 1898; re-elected captain, November 14, 1901.

Captain Joseph Lapsley Wilson, third surviving Captain of the Troop, has a proud military record. In 1862, while quite a youth, he enlisted in the Gray Reserve Regiment of Infantry, in which organization he continued until December 31, 1866, serving during the War of the Rebellion as private in Co. "C," 7th Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, 1862; corporal Co. "C," 32d Pennsylvania Militia, 1863. He entered the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, November 6, 1868; was elected second lieutenant, March 15, 1875; first lieutenant, April 2, 1877; captain, November 4, 1889; resigned, May 7, 1894, being placed on the roll of retired officers in G. O. No. 9, 1894.

CAPT. EDMUND HERBERT McCULLOUGH

Captain Edmund Herbert McCullough was born January 26, 1849, his father being the Rev. John W. McCullough, D.D., a clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal Church. His mother was Catherine Roberts Canby, daughter of James Canby, Esq., of Wilmington, Del. Captain McCullough is a member of the Delaware bar but never in active practice. In business life, he is President of the Westmoreland Coal Co. and Director in several other large corporations. He entered the Troop, October 4, 1880; was appointed corporal, November 15, 1884; sergeant, October 5, 1886; first sergeant, December 5, 1887; cornet, November 4, 1889; second lieutenant, June 5, 1893; elected first lieutenant, same year; elected captain, December, 1893, resigning in the same year, owing to pressure of business abroad.

FIRST LIEUT. J. FRANKLIN McFADDEN

First Lieutenant J. Franklin McFadden, one of the best known and most efficient cavalry officers in the State, entered the Troop January 3, 1887; received his corporal chevrons October 24, 1892; was appointed sergeant on Washington's Birthday, February 22,

TWELFTH REGIMENT NOTES

Col. C. Bow Dougherty, commanding the Ninth Regiment, has issued an order for a series of non-commissioned officers' schools. Non-coms who are absent without valid excuse will be reduced to the ranks.

Dates, subjects and instructors will be as follows:

Wednesday, Nov. 6—"Customs of the service and discipline;" instructor, Col. C. B. Dougherty.

Monday, Nov. 25—"Guard duty;" instructor, Lieut. John A. Kenny.

Wednesday, Dec. 11—"School of the soldier;" instructor, Capt. Edmund D. Camp.

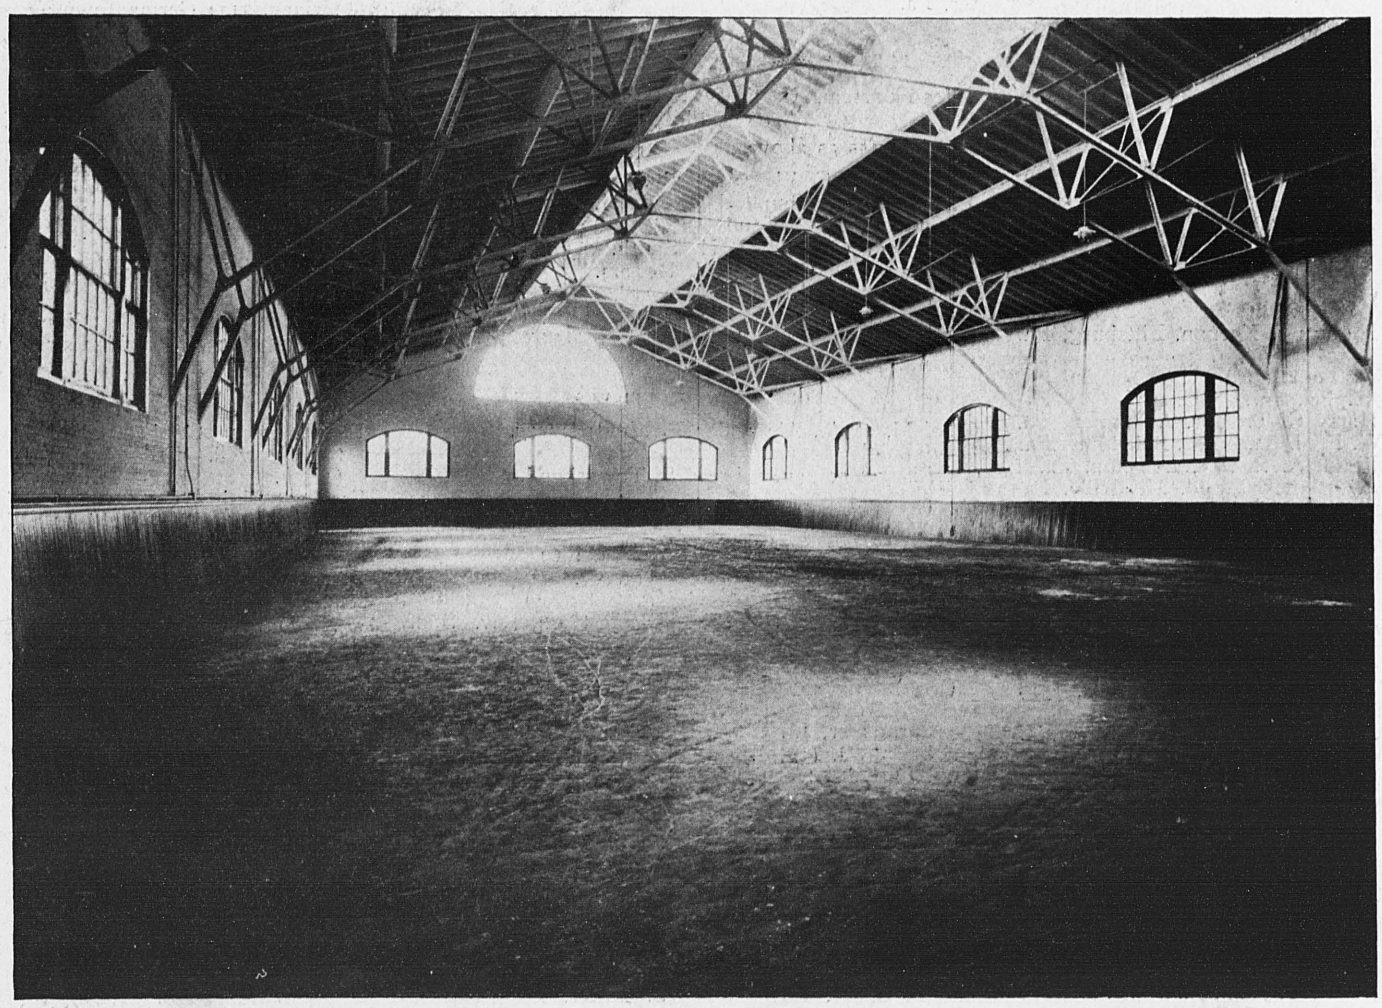
Thursday, Jan. 9—"School of the company;" instructor, Capt. James A. Dewey.

Thursday, Feb. 6—"Extended order;" instructor, Maj. F. L. McKee.

Tuesday, Feb. 25—"Review and examination;" instructor, Col. C. B. Dougherty and Lieut. John A. Kenny.

Tuesday, March 18—"Duties of non-commissoned officers;" instructor, Maj. William Sharpe.

Company F, Fourth Regiment, is to be congratulated upon its choice of Captain. Captain George R. Kalbach, who has just been elected to succeed Captain Allan, is a capable officer and has the advantage of having served under several good captains. His company has a fine record and he will work hard to maintain it in his present high standing.



DRILL SHED NEW ARMORY

The Ninth and Thirteenth Regiments indulged in a regimental shoot. The Ninth won, scoring 453 points to the Thirteenth's 428. Private Moore, of the Thirteenth, who holds the Third Brigade crack shot medal for 1901, made high score, with 88.

Corporal Sheffler Wise, of Company G, Twelfth Regiment, had two ribs broken on October 19th, while playing football.
